meadow

"My collection is inspired by the simplicity of nature and the tropics," says Miami native Meadow Compton-Gerrish, who worked as a stylist before launching her eco-conscious beachwear line almost two years ago. "I'm specifically influenced by the spot where the jungle meets the ocean in Pavones," a small Costa Rican town known for its untouched beauty, where the 32-year-old designer spends half her time. Using sustainable materials like hemp, soy, and organic cotton, Compton-Gerrish creates easy-to-throw-on pieces with a haute bohemian feel: a multi-patterned maxi dress crafted from recycled sarongs, a halter-style tunic with deep pockets for collecting seashells, and ultra-flattering bikinis and maillots made from bamboo—a fabric that "has proven to be durable in the water. I've had a ton of surfer girls in Costa Rica test it out," she says. Prices range from $42 to $200. Available at Emporium (4710 S. Le Jeune Rd., 786-268-0689); for more information, go to bymeadow.com.
